MONLTON VS. BEECHER

As the great scandal case now stands, the issue is practically reduced to a question of veracity between Francis D. Moulton and Henry Ward Beecher. Tilton has placed himself beyond the pale of recognition, and the contradictions of his persecuted and persecuted wife enable different people to form on her testimony according to their prejudices. Tilton's indictment was sustained by no direct evidence of guilt, but depended on the interpretation of certain documents which he alleged to be admissions of the crime charged. Mr Beecher has explicitly denied his guilt, and has offered a detailed statement of the circumstances during and on account of which he avers that his letters of contrition and abandonment of having injured and betrayed an unsuspicious friend, and advising his wife to leave her husband, were written. Mr Moulton who was said to have decisive documentary proofs in his possession, has failed to produce any definite evidence of guilt, but he sets his word over against that of Mr. Beecher, by declaring that he has received from both the implicated parties repeated admissions of the guilt alleged. We have thus two versions of a story which extends over a period of several years, and into which the confessions and documents are first laid by Moulton on the basis of actual and admitted guilt, and by Beecher on a basis of entire innocence of the shocking crime. The circumstances and documents are, however, before us, and some or less recondite than the rather theory according to individual bias and people will differ in opinion according to their relative faith in the integrity of Beecher or of Moulton. The amount of faith given to the statements of the one or the other will be determined in some degree by prejudice, but we believe that the better portion of the public will judge by what is known of the two men by a careful consideration of the whole and not of fragments of it, and will be by the consistency of the statements of each with the theory of their honor and integrity.

Applying these tests, we find that Mr Beecher is much more widely known than his accuser, and that, in a long and unusually conspicuous career his character has hitherto been without spot or blemish. The application of the whole evidence must be made by each one for himself, but when we come to the statement of Mr Beecher, we find that while weakness and misplaced confidence are admitted, his story is entirely consistent with his whole life and integrity. Turning to Mr Moulton, we find a man of whom little is known by the general public, except that he was the solid man at Plymouth Church, the boon companion of Theodore Tilton throughout the worst phases of his career and in his most disreputable associations. And, taking his whole story, we find his standard of honor and integrity anything but exalted. He is to be judged by his own words.

He says that on being informed that his wife had been shattered through the sin of friendship by Mr Beecher, he obtained an admission of the crime, which he accepted in extenuation as "the most ample apology." He then proceeded to obtain from the wife such influence as would enable him to draw $70 from Bowen for the purchase of a diamond ring, and otherwise assist in

EDUCATIONAL

[illegible] OF THE MAINE EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION

ROCKLAND Aug 25

The eighth annual session of the Maine Educational Association was opened at Farwell's Hall at 2 o'clock this afternoon. President C F Fletcher in the chair. Miss Tasker Lewis was chosen Secretary pro tem.

The attendance was small After the ordinary business W O Fletcher, Principal Warren High school, read the first essay of the session on "The Teacher's Power" [illegible] and could, when considered the influence by the teacher, crush out all his enthusiasm and let him down into a dull routine. He must lift heads [illegible] his own power exercised by his own last [illegible] of the things that bind teacher to [illegible] in sympathy his position gave power [illegible] he wielded with kindly earnest[illegible] revealing paternal sympathy his power [illegible] all become manifest Finally in his character lay the power which silently [illegible] of those around him Silent power [illegible] the real power

[illegible] of the essay was discussed by Mr [illegible] of Lewiston and Dr French of Vermont [illegible] Jeff of Bangor followed with an address on "The Unity of the Classics," in [illegible] and eloquently defended the study of language as the greatest of all [illegible] He said

[illegible] object to the study of a dead language, who will declaim upon the utility of [illegible], forgetting that were buried long before [illegible] became a science. Language is not a [illegible] science but the storehouse and carrier of all the sciences. Language is also the [illegible] of all knowledge. Mental philosophy, moral philosophy and the abstract sciences must be sought through words. Be the unity [illegible] variety seen in all languages we learn that all men are brothers that the origin of man was from one source such thus the Scriptures declaration is respected and our hopes of immortality strengthened and reaffirmed

At the session this evening an opening address was made by the President, G T Fletcher, of Castine, followed by a graceful and appropriate address of welcome by Hon. John Lowery, Mayor of Rockland. Rev. Dr. Hall of Portland was then introduced and proceeded to deliver a powerful address on "Imagination in Space."

NEW YORK CITY.

YELLOW FEVER ON SHIP BOARD.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25. Yellow fever is reported on board the Nova Scotian barque Evangeline which arrived at quarantine Sunday afternoon. All of her officers and crew were attacked by the fever on her voyage from Cuba to this port and three of them died. The remainder are convalescing. One of the men who died was Donald McVane, aged 30 years, of Edinburgh. On examining his trunk after his death a false bottom was found in which was a will dated 1871, from Peter McVane, of Tabbooth Wynd, in Leith leaving several houses in trust to his son, the deceased, whose annual rental was £800 The captain of the barque says he cannot imagine what reason induced McVane to ship as a common seaman.

THE CROPS IN NEBRASKA. Gov. Furnes has issued a circular to set the true state of affairs, as regards the crops, before the people. He says that the information received from various counties together with personal observation warrants the assertion that while the crops will be shorter than for several years past, there is by no means a failure of the small grains. The average for corn will be from half a crop to no crop. The roots are very short, while fruit is more in quantity but inferior in quality. No case of immediate need is yet reported. At quite a number of points on the extreme border help will be required soon and must be extended through the winter. Myriads of grasshoppers were in the air Monday going south.

The New York Herald is nothing if not sensational, and now its Paris correspondent says: "There is a doubt whether Bazaine ever really went to the Island of St. Marguerite, at all, and it is positively stated, by persons who at least seem likely to know, that the present official account of his escape is only a blind. It is a significant fact that, although a company of soldiers was kept in the island, I am in a position to affirm that none of them ever saw him there."

"A CANNIBAL AT VANCEBORO. Last Thursday night, James McGarvey, a rough, while under the influence of poor rum and possessed with a thirst for human blood, entered the room of Mr. Brooks, a railway official, pounced upon him as he lay sleeping, and succeeded in biting off one of his ears A terrible tussle ensued which resulted in the severe mangling of Brooks' face and arm, when he cries brought a number of men to his assistance, who captured the wretch, and he was taken to Fredericton for trial. As the severed ear could not be found, it is supposed that the cannibal had eaten it.

CHEESE FACTORY IN EAST CORINTH Mr. Editor.—I wrote you some time since that the farmers were waking up to the importance of having a cheese factory in East Corinth They have since commenced to raise the money for this purpose. The capital stock is to be three thousand dollars, divided into one hundred and twenty shares of twenty-five dollars each. Seventy-two shares were taken in about two days and a half and there is no doubt but the remainder will all be taken by the middle of this week. The company propose to erect their building this fall and have everything in readiness to commence in the spring. M.

NARROW ESCAPE. Yesterday morning Mr George H. Chamberlain of New York accompanied by Mrs. Dessie Frye and child, of East Somerville, Mass, drove up to the Maine Central depot in Newport, when the horse took fright. Mr. Chamberlain jumped from the carriage and took the horse by the head, but the frightened animal started to run, dragging Mr. C. some distance and obliging him to let go the rein. The horse ran to Main st, near Dow & Clement's store, where the carriage was overturned and badly smashed. The occupants were thrown out and badly bruised, but fortunately not dangerously injured. The team belonged to Mr. Henry Parshley of Dexter.

THEATRE. Another excellent audience attended Nannary & McDowell's theatre in Necombega Hall last evening. The play was "Mary Warner," (in which Miss Bateman has achieved so many triumphs,) and Miss LeClerq appeared in the title role with acquaintances which could leave in the minds of the most hypercritical of playgoing detail of her right to a position among the brightest lights on the Amer n stage. It is too often the case that "star" actors are painfully heedless in acting before any but a metropolitan audience. They, however, cannot be said of Miss LeClerq who throws her whole soul into her parts, is never careless, and in consequence awakens an irresistible enthusiasm in her audiences. Such was the case last evening, when her acting called forth round after round of applause and after the prison scene and at the close of the piece she was called before the curtain, together with Mr. Neil Warner, who rendered an admirable support as George "Warner." That there was scarcely a dry eye in the house during the closing scene may be mentioned as a tribute to the life like nature displayed by these talented artists. Miss Noah played "Milly" with fine tact, and was especially good in the garret scene. "Bob" Leavitt" found an able exponent in Mr. McDowell, and Mr. France won much praise as "Tunks," as also did Mr. Gwen as the buckram policeman Little Miss Rosa must not be forgotten, for she was perfect in her part of "Mary," and Mrs. Jamison was capital as "Mrs. Floyd." The other parts were well sustained, as is usual with this company.

To-night "Fate" will be produced, with Miss LeClercq as "Helen Faraday"—the part in which she has been playing so long and with such great success at Wallack's. To-morrow evening she will make her last appearance here and take a benefit in "Pygmalion and Galatea," one of the most charming of modern plays, though founded on the old legend. We hope and believe our citizens will give her a substantial reminder of the esteem in which she is held, by filling the house to its utmost capacity.

THE SAWYER FAMILY.

ANNUAL REUNION AT HERMON POND.

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier:

Hermon Pond has become quite a favorite resort for pleasure parties and family gatherings, and well it may be a favorite of it be often as lovely as on last Friday morning, when the gens Sawyer were summoned to its shores.

"Blithly and free the western breeze
Just kissed the lake, just stirred the trees;
And the pleased lake, like maiden coy,
Trembled, but dimples not, for joy."

Some of those who crossed the pond to bring a Small branch of the family to Newcastle's Landing the place for a chowder, can testify that the "western breeze" that morning was superlative y mild and soft in its kisses, and they found a necessary to give the lake heartier smacks with a "white ash breeze" But the wind was soon delightfully fresh, and sailing was more alluring to most of the party than croquet playing or pond lily gathering in laps, nooks and sk ffs.

In the year 1800, Stephen Sawyer of Amesbury, Mass, purchased a farm in West Hampden, and, the following year, removed there with his wife and four children. His descendants now number between one and two hundred and live in various parts of New England and the Western States. Fifty of them and of those connected with them by marriage were present at this gathering. The occasion of this party was a visit from some of their relatives, the families of Aaron and Amos Sawyer of Amesbury, Mass The whole number present was fifty-eight, of whom twenty seven bear the name Sawyer and the remaining thirty-one are called by the several family names of Martin, Holt, Patten, Small, Hewes, Knowles, Bachelder and Carter. After partaking of a bountiful chowder and picnic, the company were organized by the choice of Amos P. Sawyer, chairman; A. D. Small, secretary; and Harvey and George Sawyer of Hampden and Aaron Sawyer of Amesbury, committee of arrangements. The day was spent in pleasant ways and games upon water and shore. It was late in the afternoon,

"When the western waves of ebbing day Rolled o'er the shore their lovely way," that the first carriages took their departure; and evening had deepened into sombre night when the last pleasure-seekers were landed, through the courtesy of conductors Sanborn and Smith, at their home station on the Maine Central.

The families of Penobscot county will do well to take a day's recreation upon Hermon Pond, for they may go farther and fare worse." BENNETT.

DECISION IN LAW.

The following case in Hancock county has been decided by the Full Court and transmitted to the Clerk of Courts:—

Monroe Young et al vs Equity, vs. Carlton McGown; on demurrer to bill; "Bill dismissed with costs for defendant." Wiswell, Hale & Emery.

Report.—When an officer, through mistake, returned a levy made on the land of a stranger to the execution, when it was first made, on the land of his judgment debtor and accepted by the creditor, a Court of Equity will not compel the grantee of such debtor to release the estate, which the officer levied upon in mistake did not describe in his levy, to the grantee of the judgment creditor, whose conveyance was of the land as described in the officer's return.

Nor, it seems, will a Court of Equity after the death of the judgment debtor, and after the expiration of fifteen years, decree the correction (if a mistake in the levy, if it had been therein as the debtor c—Appleton, C. J.)

NEW MAGAZINES

LIPPINCOTT'S for September comes looking beautiful as ever, and as to the character of its contents, fully man aining the high position won for itself among the first-class American periodicals. The New Hyperion, by Edward Strahan, illustrated by Dore, is quaint, original and enjoyable as usual. The second paper, A Visit to the Dolomites, is fresh and sprightly, with some charming and well executed illustrations. The second installment of Mr. Black's Three Feathers contains some extremely pleasant reading Glimpses of Geoa, by R. Davey, is a paper containing numerous valuable facts and suggestions. Set down in the author's brilliant and lucid style. The present installment of Malcolm, by George Macdonald, is very amusing. Recollections of Massimo D'Azeglio, by T. Adolphus Trollope, is a thoroughly interesting paper, well written, and containing much information on Italian subjects not usually handled by popular writers of travel. A Trouublesome Legacy is a curious description of a very ludicrous, sentimental adventure. The Bearer of Despatches is London and A Tour of Three Steps are pleasant reading. J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia, publishers.

ST. NICHOLAS for September is brimful of seasonable papers for its young readers, among which we notice the following: The Gentle Angler; The Cheated Mosquitoes; Fast Friends; What Might Have Been Expected, The Pony Express; The Kittiwakes; Old Dutch Times in New York, etc. The number is lavishly illustrated, and is one of the best we have seen. Scribner & Co., publishers, New York.

OLD AND NEW. The September number of this standard magazine presents the following contents: Old and New; Our Sketching Club, No XIII; The Sea; Sylvester Gardiner; Das Veilchen, The Way We Live Now; Have We an Irquisition? The Emperor Tiberius; The Ascent of Ampersand Mountain; In His Chamber; Party "Treason" and Civic Duty; Nicolette and Ancasin; The Examiner, etc. The reputation and excellence of this magazine are always well sustained, and the reader can always find a feast within its pages. Roberts Brothers, publishers.

The Tribune says: "If the Plymouth scandal die out it will be no fault of Mr. Tilton's. Besides recovering damages from Mr. Beecher for crim. con., he is going to sue the newspapers for libel. There may be money in his thing yet."

NEWS BRIEFLETS.

About thirty buildings were burned in Buena Vista, Pa., Sunday morning, causing a loss of $75,000.

The breaking of a boom above St. Anthony's Falls, Minn, Sunday night, caused a loss of one hundred and twenty thousand feet of logs, valued at $12,000.

The North China news says there is a prospect that the troubles between that country and Japan with regard to the Formosan expedition will be amicably settled.

The attempted revolution at Santiago de los Caballeros in favor of Baez proved a failure and materially injured the interests of those who participated in it, particularly a number of Spanish merchants of Santiago, some of whom have left the country.
